The 43rd International Symposium on Microarchitecture is the premier forum for presenting, discussing, and debating new and innovative microarchitecture ideas and techniques for advanced computing and communication systems. The goals of this symposium are to bring together researchers in fields related to microarchitecture, compilers, and systems for technical exchange on traditional microarchitectural topics as well as emerging research areas. Historically, the MICRO community has enjoyed having close interaction between academic researchers and industrial designers; we aim to continue and emphasize this tradition at MICRO-43. Papers are solicited in fields including the following:

- ILP and TLP architectures and designs: superscalar, VLIW, multithreaded, multicore, manycore, etc.
- Compiler techniques for instruction-level, thread-level, and memory-level parallelism
- Architectures and compilers for embedded processors, DSPs, GPUs, ASIPs (network processors, multimedia, wireless, ...)
- Dynamic optimization, emulation, and object code translation
- Advanced software/hardware speculation and prediction schemes
- Power, performance, and implementation efficient designs
- Microarchitecture support for reliability, dependability, and security
- Microarchitecture modeling and simulation methodology
